

If you work in industry, what kind of software artifacts does your company make sure to collect and preserve? What kinds of artifacts are they missing? Has this ever impacted your work (positively or negatively)?

If you are in school or academia, what kind of software artifacts have you generated in group (research) projects? Have you ever had a teammate lose his portion of the work? How might you avoid that in the future?